

Dear Parents of AP Students,

We are excited that your student has elected to take on the challenges of the AP program at Prince of Peace for the 2010-2011 school year. Information was sent home with students at the end of the last school year with specific information about purchasing books for AP classes for the coming year through our website distributor, Follett Virtual Bookstores. Students are able to purchase all required texts from this site, in new or used condition, for all of their AP courses, with the exception of AP U.S. History.

Please read further for: instructions for how to use the website, a book list with the information for required texts, and a list of required readings/assignments due for AP classes.

The Follett website allows you to purchase either new or used texts according to your preference. In addition, students can sell back their used texts at the end of the course through the Follett website.

*AP U.S. History is the only course for which the text is not offered on Follett's website. The website does not sell the required edition of this text. The correct text information is found below and can be found at a number of sites. Please email Rebecca Weiss at rebecca.weiss@princeofpeace.org if you have questions.

Students will be responsible for purchasing their own texts and for having them by the first day of class. Many AP classes begin immediately as the instructional time is shortened the first semester, or simply because the national exams take place in early May. Students who do not have their textbooks are often forced to make other arrangements with students who do have texts and inevitably find themselves behind.

Thank you for your support and encouragement of your student's academic efforts. The AP program is one of the most fulfilling educational opportunities for both students and teachers; we consider it a blessing to share this experience with your children.

Sincerely,

Prince of Peace AP Teachers
